The impact of malnutrition on clinical outcomes in critically ill adults: A systematic review

Presented by: Mr Charles Lew, Senior Dietitian at Jurong Health Service, Singapore and Flinders University PhD student

Time and Date: Wednesday 8th April, 4.00 - 5:00pm
Location: Lecture Theatre 1 (5E311), Level 5 Flinders Medical Centre

Presenter Biography: Charles is a graduate of the Flinders University Bachelor of Nutrition and Dietetics Honours program which he completed in 2006. Since graduating Charles has worked in both public health and clinical dietetics. Presently he is a Senior Dietitian at Jurong Health Service in Singapore and is clinically responsible for the nutritional management of critical care patients which, on movement to the new Jurong Health Service Hospital in July 2015, will be a 72 bed critical care unit. Charles is currently undertaking his PhD at Flinders University in the area of nutrition assessment in the critical care setting and will present the findings of his systematic review which explored the evidence demonstrating a relationship between malnutrition and clinical outcomes in critically ill adults.

Register online at http://www.flinders.edu.au/events/