You are invited to a 3 hour workshop entitled Adopting Appreciative Inquiry as a strengths-based strategy in education. The workshop will include an in-depth consideration of the Appreciative Inquiry (AI) process and case studies of the application of AI within educational contexts with reference to professional practice, program evaluations and organizational cultures.

Dr David Giles (pictured) is the Associate Professor and Coordinator of Educational Leadership and Management within the School of Education. He has been teaching, researching and consulting with an Appreciative Inquiry approach since 2003, applying an AI approach in early childhood, primary, secondary and tertiary sectors working with parents, teachers, leaders and government agencies within New Zealand and Australia.
